CHICAGO WARS ON GANG CRIME WAVE

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

It seems to be open season for house to house solicitors, and the schemes and plans which they present to housewives are so numerous that one wonders at the amount of thinking wasted in fostering these hoodlums upon the unsuspecting public.

Everything from free lots, to "important information" is being handed out by these gentlemen who are daily wearing out Richmond doorbells in their search for suckers.

Sometimes we suspect that those supplying the juice for the doorbells are responsible for these gentlemen with the heavy thumbs who refuse to leave the vicinity as long as there appears to be life within a home.

One solicitor yesterday insisted upon coming into a Richmond home and being seated in a living room chair to "explain his wonderful offer." When admittance was refused he became abusive and promised all kinds of unwelcome happenings.

Something should be done, but what? If Richmond could devise some means to let these peddlers know that they and their wares are not welcome in this city it would be a wonderful aid to housewives and save hours of their time every day.

To our knowledge, there is a free lot dispenser who has visited one house in east Richmond at least three times. To date he has been unable to meet the person who has had this wonderful fortune of "winning" a free lot. And if we know what it is all about, he isn't going to get a chance to explain his wonderful proposition.

We didn't start this out with the intention of grinding an axe, but Richmond citizens will find sooner or later that those products which are sold in the local stores and advertised in the local papers are the ones which deserve consideration.

If someone comes to your door and has something to give you for nothing, there is a good chance that you are going to pay a couple of times for what he has to offer.

There are a few organizations which have house to house canvassers—but their representatives are not the ones who become offensive and insulting when they fail to make a sale.

And for the safety of the housewives we suggest that they must answer the door when these "salesmen" call, they devise some means that they will not have to open the door, not even an inch. For if some of these solicitors are given a chance to get their foot inside the door most anything is likely to happen.

Richmond has been fortunate in not having any unpleasant incidents occur by men forcing their way into homes when only a woman is at home.

It is almost impossible to control the situation by legislation. But housewives of this city can protect themselves by absolutely refusing to have any conversation with solicitors and by refusing to permit them to enter their homes.

Park Project To Be Told At Lions Club Meet

Dr. Hall Vestal will be chairman of the day at the session of the Richmond Lions club next Tuesday. Howard Thompson of Berkeley, will be the speaker. He will tell of the proposed public park in Wildcat canyon. A business meeting was held by the club yesterday at the Hotel Carquinez.

EX-LEADER OF NATION FAILING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(U.P.)—William Howard Taft fought tonight for his life against the effects of a weakening blood system.

A bulletin issued tonight on the condition of the former president and retired chief justice said: "His condition is due to arteriosclerotic changes. He has no fever and is not suffering pain. His heart is holding out well. He is more alert. We feel he is possibly a little better this evening."

Condition Serious Informally, the doctors said they did not believe Taft was in any imminent danger. Their previous bulletin of the day, repeated in part in the night bulletin, said the 72-year old patient's condition was "serious." The three physicians left the Taft home for the night, leaving him in the care of a nurse and Mrs. Taft.

President Hoover announced acceptance of his resignation, proffered yesterday, a few hours after his arrival. Hoover praised Taft for his long and distinguished service for the nation, in a letter to the jurist, it said:

"I am deeply pained at receiving your letter of resignation today. For some time I have been aware of the shock you received to your health and have been fearful lest this event should occur."

Appreciates Service "In accepting your resignation, I would like to add my personal appreciation of the long and distinguished service of a great American to his country."

"Yours faithfully, Herbert Hoover."

Hoover is keeping in constant touch with the Taft household and is being advised of the jurist's condition.

SUB SAVED FROM ROCKS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 5. (Wednesday) UP—The submarine O-3 which went aground with about 32 men aboard on rocks between Odiorne point and Parson's point at the lower entrance to Portsmouth harbor last night, berthed at the navy yard here at 12:10 today.

The O-3 was floated by the yard tug Tenacook and the commercial tug Mitchell Davis at about 11:45 p. m. last night in a heavy snowstorm as soon as the tide reached a height sufficient to allow the approach of rescuers.

The submarine was reported only slightly damaged.

Savant Lauds High Pupils

The attitude of Richmond high school pupils was praised by Prof. A. P. McKinley, state university examiner of schools, and member of the faculty of the University of California at Los Angeles, who was a visitor at the local high school yesterday.

The building and equipment of Richmond high school were also spoken of by the examiner with much admiration. All the departments at the school were visited by Professor McKinley.

Filipino Held On Gun Charge

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—UP—Antonio Pagel, 30, Filipino, was arrested today by members of a special police squad, assigned to the taxi-dance hall district to prevent outbreaks between Filipinos and white youths, when he was found in possession of a revolver. Pagel said he carried the weapon for protection. There have been no new race troubles here.

HOOVER ASKS PROBE OF U. S. RULE IN HAITI

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—UP—American military rule in Haiti, established 15 years ago after an infuriated mob dragged President Sam into the street and tore him limb from limb, must come to an end "some time," President Hoover declared today. He said he would name a commission soon to decide "when and how" America will withdraw and "what we shall do in the meantime."

The announcement, the first declaration of the Hoover administration underlying Haitian policy, came just before the House adopted Senate amendments to the resolution proposed by the president for the investigation.

Pointing out that the treaty of 1915 under which the United States took over administration of Haiti would expire in 1936, Hoover declared:

New Policy "We need a new and definite policy looking toward the expiration of our treaties."

Hoover set forth two objectives for the commission of five or seven men which he will appoint soon to study Haitian conditions. He said:

"The primary question which is to be investigated is when and how we are to withdraw from Haiti. The second question is what we shall do in the meantime."

Withdraw Marines Secondly we shall withdraw our marines and officials some time. There are some people who wish for us to scuttle overnight. I am informed that every group in Haiti considers that such action would result in disaster to the Haitian people."

"On the other hand, our treaty of 1915 under which our forces are present in that country, in the main, expires in 1936, or six years hence. We have no mandate to continue the present relationship after that date."

"We have an obligation to the people of Haiti, and we need to plan how we will discharge that obligation."

Probe Asked "There is need to build up a certain efficient and stable government, in order that life and property may be protected after we withdraw. We need to know, therefore, what subsequent steps would be taken in cooperation with the Haitian people to bring about that result."

Wise consideration of these problems, Hoover said, demands "careful consideration of the entire subject by men of unbiased minds."

Mrs. S. Lewis Called By Death

Mrs. Sallie Lewis, 56, died at the Lewis family home 220 Kelsey street last night. Mrs. Lewis was a native of Tennessee and had lived in Richmond 11 years.

She leaves her husband, David Lewis, and a daughter, Mrs. Rose Robinson of Richmond.

10 BANDITS ROB OFFICE OF $3000

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 4.—UP—Ten bandits lugged a machine gun into the main office of the Western Union Telegraph company here tonight, held up half a dozen clerks and one woman customer and escaped with $3000.

The office is on the main floor of a downtown skyscraper in the center of Detroit's banking district. The leader of the gang covered everyone in the office with the gun while his assistants ransacked cash drawers for their loot.

Hugh M. Griffin, office manager, had locked most of the day's receipts in the safe. The robbers apparently were afraid to take time enough to attempt to open it. Griffin said they seemed to have a thorough knowledge of the office layout and that they went through the routine of holding it up much as soldiers would go through a military drill.

While the Blake family was in the rear of their home listening to their radio, the thief entered the front door and ransacked the bedroom, throwing the loot outside of the window.

Hearing a noise in the front part of the house, Mrs. Blake called police. When officers arrived, the burglar hastily fled, leaving the jewelry lying upon the ground.

Whipping Post For Husbands Asked

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4.—UP—Use of the whipping post to punish husbands who beat their wives was recommended by Superior Judge Thomas F. Graham here today when he granted a divorce to Mrs. Julia Selva, 22, Mrs. Selva had testified her husband hit her with fists and whipped her with his belt.

MARRIAGE LICENSES Application for a marriage license was made in Martinez recently by Zeona Gonzales, 23, of 460 C street, and Lorenz Cardoza, 22, 543 B street Richmond.

LOCAL MAN DEPORTED TO ITALY

Red tape has deported a Richmond man to Italy, leaving behind him his wife of six months, sorrowing and lonely.

The husband is Dante Tolomei, 28, of 831 Lassen avenue, Richmond, and the wife is Mrs. Vivian Tolomei, 25.

When the couple married six months ago they went to Mexico on their honeymoon, experiencing no trouble in crossing the international line into old Mexico.

But when they came back it was a different story. Border authorities refused to allow Tolomei to return, declaring that he was an alien. Tolomei showed his immigration papers and his passport, declaring that he had lived in America ten years.

This, immigration authorities said, made no difference. He was an alien and could not enter America because Italy's quota for the year was full.

Becoming reckless, Tolomei crossed the line at night, far from an immigration station, and rejoined his sorrowing bride.

They came back to Richmond, preparing to settle down to a happy married life in their little home.

In the meantime immigration authorities started a search for Tolomei and several days ago a federal official appeared at the Tolomei home, ordering the man to go back to Italy. At the present time, Tolomei is enroute to New York, where he will take a ship for Italy.

Immigration inspector Benson declared yesterday that the case was unjust on Tolomei's part, but declared that the young husband had made an illegal entry into the United States from Tajana.

Mrs. Tolomei would have followed her husband to Italy, but he prevailed upon her to stay.

"I'll come back soon," he said. And Mrs. Tolomei waits for her husband here while friends and immigration authorities are making an effort to have Tolomei included in the next quota of immigrants to be entered here from Italy.

POLICE ROUT BURGLAR HERE

Police last night frightened away a burglar who had entered the home of Mrs. Jean Blake, 569 Fifth street. In fleeing, the thief left behind him jewels valued at $106.75.

While the Blake family was in the rear of their home listening to their radio, the thief entered the front door and ransacked the bedroom, throwing the loot outside of the window.

Hearing a noise in the front part of the house, Mrs. Blake called police. When officers arrived, the burglar hastily fled, leaving the jewelry lying upon the ground.

Local Girls Paid Honor In Germany

Two former Richmond girls were honored by the German government when they were selected as the most distinguished among all of the American students at Munich and were given seats of honor at several fetes in honor of foreign students.

The girls are Rosamund and Patricia Stanley, graduates of the University of California and the Richmond union night school. They are the daughters of Mrs. Anne Stanley Harney, 2229 Durant avenue, Berkeley, who formerly lived here.

Both girls are students at the famous Hans Hoffman academy of art at Munich and have won signal honors in the field of painting, canvas and dry paint. Patricia was graduated from the university last year with highest honors in art. She was art director of the Little theater there for four years and for three years in a row she won the coveted poster contest prize in connection with the staging of the Parthenon play.

Miss Rosamund, two years older than her sister, graduated in 1926 and was a teaching fellow in art at the university. One of her drawings has been chosen for the cover of this year's summer session folder.

In Berlin the Stanley girls were two out of some 60 students chosen by the government from visiting students of all nationalities. All their expenses were paid during a four day visit to the capital where they were feted.

Demonstration Of Tear Gas Successful

A recent demonstration offered by a tear gas bomb salesman at the Richmond office of the Richmond-San Rafael ferry proved to the satisfaction of all parties concerned that tear gas is "the goods."

The two parties most vitally concerned, H. T. Gill, secretary, and Howard Hopkins, assistant secretary of the ferry company, will willingly attest to the fact.

While deeply engrossed with their work, the two company officials were interrupted by two salesmen from Pittsburgh, who insisted that the company needed wearing glasses saved his eyesight. As it was he has been forced to have eye treatments, and was a quantity of tear gas bomb.

Power Companies To Fight Rate Slashes

That gas and electric companies do not intend to submit to the orders of the state railroad commission ordering slashes in power rates was revealed at a meeting of the commission in San Francisco yesterday.

The Pacific Gas and Electric company yesterday filed a petition for a rehearing on the commission's recent order, on the ground that the new rates are too low and do not include a number of items with which the company should be credited.

In another order, the commission ordered the Great Western and the P. G. and E. to put into effect on the same day the lower

$12,000 Paid Shaws Redmans In Scalding

District Attorney A. B. Tinning announced yesterday that claims filed against the Richmond Union high school district by the J. O. Redman and J. H. Shaw families had been settled out of court for a total of $12,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Redman received that amount, $12,500 for the death of their daughter Wave, who was fatally scalded in a shower at the Roosevelt Junior high school a year ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw received the other $500 for burns suffered by their daughter Alice at the same time.

Shortly after the accidents, the school board installed automatic controls over the showers, to prevent recurrences of this type of accident.

Settlement with the Redman family included $6,700 for medical

7 VICTIMS IN LESS THAN WEEK

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—(U.P.)—The seventh victim of gangster bullets in less than a week fell dead here late today only a few hours after it had been revealed that a special grand jury had taken steps to curb a new crime wave, almost unprecedented even in Chicago.

A man about 30 years old and identified only as "Phil," a west side alcohol distiller, was shot five times through the head by two assassins who escaped on foot. Spectators, so excited that they turned in a fire alarm, were unable to describe the murderers.

The shooting took place while Commissioner of Police William E. Russell still was in another one-sided and protracted conference with state's attorney John A. Swanson.

Swanson said that growing public indignation over the "new outburst of gangland savagery" made drastic police action necessary.

He called the police commissioner on the carpet yesterday after the bullet riddled body of "Handsome Joe" Cadda, racketeer, was found in his automobile. When William E. Russell, who was found critically wounded today, Swanson sent another call to the harried commissioner of police.

After police had rounded up half a dozen suspects in the shooting of Healy, who was found with three bullet wounds in his head, the state's attorney revealed that a special grand jury had returned indictments against four notorious gangsters on charges of carrying concealed weapons.

The true bills were voted against Jack McGurn, Danny Stanton, Tony Accardo and Frank Diamond, all of whom were seized recently for carrying loaded revolvers. Swanson said the grand jury's action was part of his plan to put Chicago's numerous law-trigger machine gunmen behind the bars.

Shortly before Healy was found, Chicago bandits invaded the exclusive North Shore suburb of Kenilworth where they riddled the home of E. B. Mallers, millionaire, and escaped with loot valued by Mallers at $20,000.

ELKS HONOR PAST RULERS

Past Exalted Rulers' night was held by the Richmond lodge of Elks last night at the clubhouse, with Past Exalted Ruler Frank Tiller in charge of the initiation.

Prior to the meeting a dinner was held for the past officers at the Hotel Carquinez.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Oliver Kehrling, past exalted ruler of the Oakland lodge, gave an illustrated lecture on mountain climbing in California.

Next Tuesday night, Dr. C. Walter Cole will preside over a business meeting.

Term Suspended On Promise To Repay Victims

J. J. Martin was given a suspended jail sentence yesterday when he promised to pay back $10 he collected from El Cerrito residents on photography work. Sentence was passed by Justice of the Peace A. A. Alstrom, who was sitting for Police Judge J. F. Plank in El Cerrito.

Martin was arrested on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses. Complaining witness charged that he obtained deposit money for work on making enlargements of photographs and never did the work.

Martin promised to pay back the money.

When Cheating the Calendar Loses the Game

THE secret of why women cheat the calendar—which is such an open secret—

The explanation of why women go on a diet, use elaborate makeup and fib about their age.

Has been summed up by us, and we think other women will agree.

As due to the fair sex's incurable instinct to please men—

Men who, as we said in last week's fable, have, so many of them, no manner of use.

For the woman who doesn't at least convey the illusion

Of youth and beauty.

We still insist that cheating the calendar

Often helps a woman to get a husband—

Or even to get a job—

That romantic and economic reasons justify her in cheating.

And that she often gets away with it.

Nevertheless, cheating the calendar may lose the game for a woman—

For the game of sex-attraction, which is the one she is playing—

It all depends with WHOM she plays.

And how well he knows the cards she held in her hand before she began to cheat.

For example, if anybody is aware of how old a woman actually is, and exactly what she looks like, in her most unadorned moments—

That person is the man to whom she has been married for years.

And it does seem foolish for her to think that, by cheating the calendar, she can win the game with him.

The futility of her endeavor has been analyzed sensibly, yet sympathetically, by the distinguished psychiatrist, Dr. John Rathbone Oliver, in his new autobiography, "Foresight."

Dr. Oliver has made a professional study of the woman who, by calendar-cheating, tries to hold her husband, and we earnestly advise every such woman to read his diagnosis of her case.

"The effort to appear youthful is harmless enough and not very interesting," he begins.

"But what does interest psychiatrists is the reason for it."

"Why should a middle-aged woman with a clear, logical mind."

"Clever in her way, experienced and very critical of others of her own sex."

"Why should she torment herself."

"And make herself constantly uncomfortable."

"In order to assume a transient look of youthfulness."

"Which might possibly deceive an aged man."

"But the clean eye of youth—the very youth which this woman is trying to assume—"

"Perceives easily with unspoken pitilessness."

"In other words, what is she trying to get out of it all?"

"She feels that her happiness is still dependent on a man or on men."

"Then, by cheating the calendar, she is rather to be pitied than criticized."

"She loves her husband; she is trying to hold him."

"And the fact that she is trying says, loudly enough."

"That he does not love her as much as she loves him."

"Or, at least, not in the same way."

"A woman may live with a husband for years, and yet misunderstand his love."

"For, in the office of sex, men and women differ so fundamentally from one another."

"That there is greater opportunity for misunderstanding here."

"Than in another part of their relationships."

"A wife may, and often does, believe that her husband."

"Who at fifty still looks like a young man."

"Cares for his wife only so long as she looks like a young woman."

"And so she tries—how hard she tries sometimes—"

"To look as young as he does."

"Often enough these attempts of hers, distress him."

"More than they attract."

"He knows, and he believes she ought to know."

"That she is the one woman in the world for him."

"No matter whether she looks old or young."

"And I have known cases in which the husband has been alienated from his wife."

"By the very artifices which she uses."

"In the hope of retaining a devotion that was unquestioningly hers."

"Until she, by her own actions, showed that she doubted it."

"On the other hand, if the husband really has a 'young eye'."

"If youth and youth only attracts him."

"Then his wife may frequent all the beauty parlors in Christendom."

"She may anoint and paint herself like the Queen of Sheba."

"Yet she will not deceive her Solomon."

"The very fact that she is making of herself a travesty of the youth that attracts him."

"Emphasizes to him the realization."

"That she no longer possesses the thing that he seeks."

"Here, again, her efforts to look like something that she can never be again."

"Only bring about the very catastrophe that she has been fighting to avoid."

"So, if the woman who is fighting against time."

"Be fighting for the physical expression of her husband's love."

"She is beaten before she begins."

"Her safety lies, as it lies for most of us."

"In being ourselves."

"If she gives up her fight."

"Dresses in accordance with her years."

"And drops the little attentions of youth."

"She will have a much greater chance of holding a husband."

"Who loves, not the way she looks, but the woman who she is."

"And if the husband's affection does happen to be waning."

"She will never, never win it back."

"By pretending to be something that she can never be again."

"By being herself she may not be able to retain his affection."

"But she will at least keep his respect."

"There are women to whom Dr. Oliver's dose will seem bitter."

"But if they take it, it will do them good!"

Care of Linoleum

If you are scrubbing your linoleum or even frequently mopping it with strong soap suds you are destroying its finish and decreasing its length of service.

Of course, linoleum becomes soiled and must be cleaned. If you wax or varnish it you will be able to keep it clean with a damp cloth. This treatment will also materially extend its wearing qualities.

TELLING THE WORLD

By Neal O'Hara

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930.

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT, a New York architect, is going to build an eighteen-story apartment house completely made of glass. We don't know if this innovation will be a success, but it will certainly make it easier to find lost collar buttons.

Ancient Babylon had its hanging gardens. Now New York will have its perpendicular hot houses. You can't keep a city like that down.

An apartment house constructed solely of glass will have its good points at that. But can you imagine what an interior decorator will charge for fixing the place up with curtains?

For one thing, an all-glass house will discourage wives from throwing flatirons. When a benedict rolls in at 3 A. M. he can be sure he won't be socked with anything harder than a sofa pillow.

We don't know much about the interior furnishings of these glass apartments but we hope the bathrubs are opaque. And the shower bath curtains aren't mosquito netting.

On the other hand, when you're living in an all-pane domicile, it is going to be tough to make installment collectors think you aren't at home. And the folks on the ground floor apartment are going to know how it feels to be clothing dummies.

A point in this new project worth considering by apartment hunters, however, is that glass is a non-conductor of electricity. And if that means they can't get radio programs in this new building, the entire eighteen stories will be filled inside of two weeks.

The plate glass structure will also, naturally, be fireproof. But we are trying to think what will happen when the rooms are heated to 80 degrees Fahrenheit and a cold rain beats down outside. Something is going to crack somewhere.

The main purpose of using glass exclusively for the building is to permit the occupants to be benefited by the ultra-violet rays. On a six months' lease you can absorb enough of those ultra-violet rays to spend the rest of your life in a cave. But no matter what, else may be said against the project, it is just the place for a girl to train to become a movie ticket seller in a plate glass booth.

It is said that leases will shortly be issued to prospective tenants. And if Greta Garbo ever moves into an all-glass apartment, we are going to get a job as an outside window washer.

Just as soon as this architect's dream is erected, we'll bet the little boys of the neighborhood start saving up for diamond rings so they can draw pictures and write initials on the plate glass clipboards. And can you imagine what a revival there will be of the little fellows' classic pastime—tick-tack-toe?

Still, we wish this startling novelty all the luck in the world. If an all-glass apartment building is a success, it will encourage people to save their old gin bottles and build a home of their own.

After mulling the thing over, we don't see how the project can possibly fail. For if the owner can't rent a single apartment he can still fill the whole place with water and he's got an aquarium.

Coiffure and Dress Should Harmonize

THE style of one's dress should be in keeping with the coiffure. The other day we observed a woman who affects an extremely short, rather masculine bob and was wearing a severely plain office dress, topped off by a dilly lace collar, as indicated in the drawing to the right. This is hardly consistent. The business dress of unrelieved severity is not especially attractive, but the larger drawing shows how a feminine touch may be introduced by the small yoke of lace and the neck-lace, without quarreling with the ensemble effect.

By giving a rubber stamp a jointed handle its inventor claims to insure even impressions of its type, free from blurring.

Three-wheeled taxicabs are being used in Vienna, being driven by a man seated over the third wheel, which is in the rear.

A new pocket cigar lighter is ignited by pulling a pin across a flint to produce sparks, saving the wear on the thumb of a milled wheel.

The control of street lights by radio waves has been demonstrated by electrical experiments.

Weighting, but twenty-four pounds, what is claimed to be the world's smallest complete automobile has been made in Germany. Its builder controlling it by strings, as it is too small to be entered.

A motion picture film invented in England having a paper base is claimed to have 50 per cent. longer life and 25 per cent. more transparency than existing films and to cost less.

The front, rear or both ends of an automobile together can be raised with a new jack that is intended to be permanently mounted and operated by a crank at one side.

A Don Juan With Scruples

AMERICAN women will regret, after a reading of "Tantalus," that Mrs. Jo Van Ammers-Kuller was not given an opportunity to see more women of the type of Joan, one of the characters in this exceedingly fine novel. The characters she has presented as she glimpsed them during 1925 when she visited America, suffer tragically in juxtaposition with Thora, the representative Dutch wife of her story. But one must concede, after recognizing her descriptions of various places, that here is an author with keen vision and an ability to describe accurately what she has seen.

What an unappetizingly interesting story of present-day marriage problems this is! With what intelligence does this author present to her readers the modern tendencies of married men and women!

First of all, it might be well to explain to the uninformed the meaning of "Tantalus." Funk & Wagnall's offers: "Son of Zeus the father of Niobe; for revealing the secrets of Zeus he was plunged to the neck in water, with fruit hanging above him, but both receded when he attempted to taste them."

This definition will intrigue you into the story of Evert Tideman, the wealthy factory owner of Holland, who loved his charming, capable wife, who had given him several children, but who still found in his imagination, visions of romance, past, present and yet-to-be.

As the story opens, one sees him meeting an old friend, Herbert Donald, a countryman, who had married an American girl. They meet in front of the Cafe de la Paix in Paris. By chance they encounter two Vassar girls and have a mild flirtation with them. Evert, who could not hide from his wife this meeting, betrays himself by the nervous manner in which he explains it, but Thora keeps her wisdom to herself and does not reproach him. On their return to Holland, however, her family climb the walls of her contentions and sneer at Evert's behavior, which makes Thora most unhappy. Herbert Donald, who has come to their home for a visit, cautions her in this manner:

"Thora, do you know that French play by—what's his name?—Brieux, I think. It's called 'The Cockchafers.' It always thought that a splendid symbol. It's the symbol of the old-fashioned solid marriage... Cockchafers on a thread. They imagine themselves splendidly free. Now and then they even try to fly. But just a tug at their feet and they are once more safely in the box with the little holes pierced in its lid... Why can't two intelligent, well meaning human beings grant each other mutual freedom—not as a gift after, but as a right of citizenship? Why must there always be deceit and scenes and divorces? Why must it always result in a second equally unsuccessful marriage? Only because for twenty centuries the notion has been rammed into people's heads that the moment a man and a woman have entered into the bonds of holy matrimony they may never again entertain a sentimental regard for a member of the opposite sex."

Thora resented his advice. Shortly afterward she discovered her husband kissing the nurse in the household and after a consultation with her family was about to sever all relationships but forgave Evert again, when he said:

"Thora, keep it very firmly in your mind that I could never do without you and the children and that I could never be happy without you."

For a long time, all went smoothly. Evert became a typically Dutch husband and centered all his thoughts on his family and his home. Then came his trip to America.

In America he met Joan, wife of Herbert, and watched with astonished eyes the relationship existing between these two—man and wife, who lived in separate domiciles. He listened to Herbert praise the arrangement and heard his wife: "She climbs from one rung to the other, she has the real fighting spirit that's required in this country, and the result at present is this royal palace, the Buick, and an account at the bank."

The royal palace was a home in Larchmont. From this home, Evert is carried to many scenes of American life that apparently were witnessed by the author. Her description of a certain club in Westchester is one such as a foreigner might see.

"The club was a colossal building set on a high hill. It seemed to be all aglow inside and to radiate light through its hundreds of windows that were like hundreds of sparkling jewels on the deep, dark velvet of the summer night. The car passed first for several minutes through the golf course where an occasional lamp threw its cold and distant light over a green; then it turned to the side of the building and Joan skillfully parked it among the innumerable cars already there."

Streams of people were pushing at the entrance—people who wanted to come in and people who wanted to get out. Just like the senseless, nervous comings and goings of bees by the entrance of their hive.

Again he walked through wide, harshly lit rooms where jazz bands shook the air with on the twisted and shuffled and sludged together in a twisting mass of limbs and grinning heads. Young and old men with gray hair and furrowed faces and boys with pink smooth cheeks, women who seemed to be children and others who might have been their grandmothers. Dante's inferno might have looked like this."

In America, Evert is swept on one Don Juan adventure to another. His romance with the beautiful Gyp ending in disaster, he turns to Margaret and finds that Margaret (why did the author label her Maggie for short?) thinks it's called "The Cockchafers."

She follows him to Holland, and before he realizes that he has been caught, he is swept away from Thora and into the arms of Margaret.

What a fiasco the second marriage proved! When Herbert comes abroad again the following year, he finds his friend in abject misery, too proud to admit his failure. Herbert, in an effort to be a friend, goes to Thora and begs her to be big and reach out her hand to him, to save him from going down."

At first, Thora declares he is mad, then she hesitates and then comes the thought of her family—and she knew it could not be.

So Herbert walks away pondering: "Was there any human being who really would have dared to break loose? Was not every person colored by the soil in which he rooted, much more than he realized himself, and was not everybody the complex result of what hundreds of generations had put into him, and of the innumerable influences grafted upon that stem by early education?"

These were mad, disrupted times. The next generation would stand stronger and would see "life more clearly. Out of the present chaos it would evolve new values."

We trust we have made this book attractive to the readers of this column, for it is a big book. It is a book that will or ought to receive the deep appreciation of every woman. Evert Tideman will help them, perhaps, to an understanding of men.

You and Your Child

By Irma Morris

Learning to Live and Let Live

THE scene was a kindergarten room. It was Ronald's first day at school. He looked from one child to another. The children paid little attention to him. They were all busily occupied. The teacher showed Ronald the shelves filled with toys and work material. She suggested several occupations, but Ronald showed little interest. Finally, however, becoming tired of inaction, he ran over to a little boy and gave a whack to his castle of blocks. Down it tumbled! Next Ronald put his foot right in the middle of a sand pie a little girl had just made. Immediately after that, eyeing Barbara, who was putting her doll to sleep, he dextrously threw over her doll carriage.

This sort of behavior lasted for several days. Miss Newton, the teacher, tried out many different ways of winning the child to a more co-operative attitude, but to no avail.

On his fourth day at school, Ronald noticed two little boys making boats at the work bench. He asked Miss Newton for material so that he might do likewise. As soon as these two boys had finished, Miss Newton allowed Ronald and another little fellow to use the bench. Ronald started to work with a vim, but his fellow worker seemed to be having trouble.

"Ronald, won't you help Paul a little?" He seems to be having a hard time," Miss Newton suggested. Ronald did so; and after some hard work, the two boys had their boats finished. They proudly exhibited them to their teacher. Miss Newton suggested that they highly, turned to Ronald saying: "That was nice of you to help Paul with his boat." With that, little Paul threw his arms around Ronald's neck, saying gratefully, "Oh, thank you. Ronald smiled broadly. From that time on Miss Newton never had any trouble with Ronald. He had learned that helping "pals" better than destroying them.

Children learn the give and take of life through playing together. If given the opportunity of companionship with children their own age, wisely guided, they can learn many of these lessons, even before kindergarten years. The bossy child, playing with a group of children as old and as bright as himself, soon finds out that bossiness does not make for popularity. The shy child can be encouraged to take his part in the group. The spoiled youngster learns that extreme selfishness will not be tolerated.

Children at every stage, need the companionship of other children of their own age; and through this companionship they constantly learn to "live and let live."

The Beauty Shop

For Want of a Rub

A WELL known doctor was bemoaning the fate of his hair. "I can count them now. Soon I shan't be able to do even that—there won't be any to count. And don't you suppose I know how to save the crop?"

Course I do. Scalp massage, that's the way. Just a few minutes each day. Haven't you heard of it?"

Then there's Mrs. C. Knows from experience—clients' experience—that a chin that is spanked five minutes every day grows young and single. In other words, the "ounce of prevention and the pound of cure" principle once again.

And we could go on interminably citing examples of people who know the tricks of keeping young and attractive—yes, beauty editors included—yet who let themselves drift into pre-late middle age and unattractiveness for "lack of time."

"Lack of time." Is it that? The doctor admitted that a few minutes of scalp massage each day would save him from baldness. Mrs. C. knows from experience—clients' experience—that a chin that is spanked five minutes every day grows young and single. In other words, the "ounce of prevention and the pound of cure" principle once again.

I have it on the word of an eminent beauty surgeon that five minutes of daily spanking a face when it is reasonably young is worth $5,000 spent on the face gets hopeless old. In other words, the "ounce of prevention and the pound of cure" principle once again.

Let's not talk about having "no time." Let's not so much think about it—there's no truth in it anyway. Let's think and talk instead about forming a few beauty habits. Better yet, let's form them. You know, the wonder and the magic about forming habits is they soon begin to form us!

LOCAL SCOUTS TO JOIN IN CELEBRATION

Richmond Scouts are joining with Scouts throughout the nation in a varied program of activities to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of Scouting in America. Troop mobilization will be one of the major events. The day and hour will be known only to the members of the committee who will direct the event. M. F. Beebe, T. A. Dugan and William McCoy will be in charge.

Just what the Scout troops will be called on to do will not be known until they reach the scene of mobilization. At the appointed hour orders will go out from Scout headquarters to each of the Scoutmasters telling them to mobilize their troop and where to report. It is expected that within an hour every Scout will be in his uniform and ready to report for duty. No special training has been done in advance for this event and it will be a demonstration to the community just how well Richmond Scouts are prepared to serve in an emergency which is part of the regular training that every Boy Scout receives in his troop activities.

Scouts have been called on in many of the disasters throughout the world and have done outstanding service in every case, recently in Contra Costa county Scouts of Crockett were mobilized within an hour to conduct a hunt in the back-hills of Pinole to find an aged man. Several Scouts in Richmond and Contra Costa county have shown their preparedness in saving lives from drowning. Be prepared to do his best, is the motto of the Boy Scout. The twentieth anniversary finds 356,000 Scouts in America doing their best.

PARKS MUST BE PAID FOR SAYS DR. PARDEE

If the water shed lands owned by the East Bay Municipal Utility district are used for parks, they must be paid for and the expense of administering the parks must be carried by some departmental government other than the utility district. This was the dictum laid down by Dr. George C. Pardee, president of the utility district in his monthly letter to the public. Pardee approved the idea of the eastbay cities securing large areas of lands for parks while such lands are available, but said it would be impossible for the utility district to present lands for that purpose through any of the East Bay municipalities.

Dr. Pardee pointed out that the lands in question are worth several millions of dollars and if they should be turned into parks, without compensation to the district, the people would have to supply in some way the several million dollars represented by the lands.

"If the lands now sought for parks should be sold, the money resulting therefrom would be used to reduce the expenses of the district," said Dr. Pardee. "This could take the form of paying the interest on the district bonds, reducing the bonded debt or making improvements and additions to the distribution system. If on the other hand, the district should turn these lands into parks the people would have to assess themselves in one way or another to make up for those millions of dollars."

"Some of the enthusiastic park advocates even go so far as to propose that the East Bay Municipal Utility district should itself administer the proposed park. It would cost a lot of money to lay out that park. It would also cost for water, for labor, for superintendence, etc.—a lot of money."

annually to maintain the park. The district should go into the park business, how could it, having no source of income other than its water service, meet these expenses? Not out of its water service, surely. Only taxes remain with which to do it.

"Finally, let it not be forgotten that the people of the district must make up, in some way or other, the deficit in the district's finances, if the district's parkable lands be not sold, but are turned into free-grass for nothing parks or anything else.

"Parks are, of course, good, very good, almost indispensable things, like good streets and good schools and plenty of good water, for large and growing cities like ours. They ought to be gotten while the getting is good and while the land is available.

SEATS LIMITED FOR BARRIER BANQUET

The rush for tickets to the salt water barrier dinner at the Hotel Carquinez Saturday night, indicates an overflow house, in the opinion of C. S. Renwick, chairman of the chamber of commerce arrangements committee, who urged all comers to make their reservations at the earliest possible date.

Renwick pointed out that the seating capacity will be limited to 200 and that many will be turned away unless reservations are made well in advance.

"This is to be the only meeting held in Contra Costa county which will be attended by the legislative committee and I feel that it is of the utmost importance that every industry in the county and in the communities surrounding it be represented," said C. M. Schedler, president of the Salt Water Barrier association.

To Stress Importance

According to Schedler, every effort will be made to show the visiting committee the important points in Contra Costa county to impress upon them the importance of constructing a barrier somewhere in Carquinez straits to hold back tides and to protect the huge investments in agriculture and industry along the bay shore and in the back country.

The committee will leave Stockton at 9 o'clock on Sunday morning and will be met on the Borden highway at the Contra Costa line by Sheriff R. R. Veale and a delegation of Contra Costa and Solano county citizens.

From here the committee will be taken to Brentwood, Oakley, over the Antioch bridge, through Sherman island, back to Antioch and thence to Pittsburg, all of these places being affected by the barrier. The Columbia Steel plant will be inspected in Pittsburg and luncheon will be had in that city under the direction of Harry Barnes, president of the Pittsburg chamber of commerce.

To View Sites

In the afternoon the party will travel over the Willow pass to Concord where they will hold a meeting with the Farm Center. They will then go to Walnut creek to Martinez, Crockett and Richmond. In Martinez they will be shown the proposed army site for the bay barrier and will also inspect the progress of the work on the new Southern Pacific bridge. Stop will be made at the proposed Dillon site of the bay barrier.

The Richmond dinner will be held at 6:30 o'clock at the Hotel Carquinez with E. B. Bull as toastmaster introducing members of General offices will be maintained in a new building to be erected on the properties of the company between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets on Cutting boulevard.

The company, in addition to home building, plans to conduct a general brokerage business.

Application has been filed with the commissioner of securities for permission to dispose of stock in the company.

Merry, Mylander and Alderson are directors and officers of the company.

Still More Millions Treat Colds Direct

Round-About Method of "Dosing" Gives Way To Modern Vaporizing Salve

More and more people each year are giving up the slow, indirect way of treating colds by "dosing" with internal medicines, and are adopting the modern direct treatment—Vicks VapoRub.

Vicks goes direct to the affected parts and checks the cold in two ways—its medicated vapors, released by the heat of the body, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages; at the same time it acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness.

Vicks is especially appreciated by mothers because it is just rubbed on, and therefore, cannot upset children's delicate stomachs. "Dosing" is so apt to do. Today the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

To keep pace with the ever-growing demand, the famous slogan, "17 Million Jars Used Yearly" was raised to "21 Million" a short time ago. This figure too has been outgrown, as there are now "Over 25 Million Jars Used Yearly"—a jar for every family in the United States.

Warm guests--

when there is heat at a finger's touch

During a social evening, does some member of your family interrupt the party to fuss with the furnace?

With gas fuel burning in your furnace, a thermostat or a push-button regulates the temperature. No annoying trips to the basement. No bother about starting a fire when friends come—a finger's touch gives you instant heat. And any healthful temperature is maintained throughout your home.

With clean gas fuel, the curtains, wall-paper and furniture retain their fresh cleanliness. There is no smoke or soot about your property.

Even though you have no basement, there are fine types of gas-fired heating equipment for your home.

For full details about heating equipment that burns gas fuel, see a heating contractor or telephone or call at our office.

LEAGUE SCOUTS SIGN LOCAL PLAYERS

That Pacific Coast league scouts are hot on the trail of the local diamond stars has been evidenced by the signing of contracts with the Missions by "Babe" Panella, "Kid" McCoy and young Doyle Taylor.

The expected happened immediately following the Thomas Motors contest with San Leandro on Sunday when Panella, first baseman for the Motors, signed his name on the dotted line, thereby giving his services for the coming season to the Missions.

Panella has certainly earned this chance to climb to the higher realms of ballroom, for he has played an extraordinary brand of ball with many teams throughout the eastbay. "Babe" turned up for practice at the training camp of the Pittsburgh Pirates last year, but failed to make connections with the eastern team. He has been continually followed since then by a Pittsburgh scout. However, the Mission scout stepped in at the convenient moment, thereby securing a good bargain for the team he represents. It is pretty certain that Manager Kilmer of the Missions will spot the local product, and fans believe that they will soon see Panella in the regular lineup of the Missions.

The accession of McCoy to the Coast league was also forecast by local followers of the sport. McCoy has pranced around the third sack in sensational style during the present season with the Motors, and has attracted wide attention by his ability to slam the ball over the fence.

Doyle Taylor's graduation to the Missions followed his surprising showing on the mound two weeks ago with the Motors in their contest with the San Pablo nine. Selected among the fans recent sphere, equipped across the first street home plate in such a manner, and the Motors' victory was in a large part due to the hurling of Taylor. Taylor ought to do well with the Missions.

High Cagers, Hayward To Close Series

The varsity quintets of Richmond Union high school and Hayward high school will meet in the deciding game of a three-game series between the two schools tomorrow night at the Richmond Union high school gymnasium.

The first game of the season between the local and Hayward high school fives was won by Hayward. This contest was played before both Richmond and Hayward were expelled from the Alameda County Athletic league. Richmond then came back strong by defeating the Haywardites. And now the outcome for tomorrow night's game looks very uncertain. If Richmond plays as well as it did in its last game against the "Farmers," it ought to come out on the heavy end of the score in the final game of the series.

A record crowd is expected at tomorrow night's contest, for this is the first night game to be played in Richmond this season by the Richmond Union high quintet.

The B squads of both schools will also tangle tomorrow night. The Richmond Union high school B's have already won their part of the Richmond-Hayward series. The present B squad is recognized as one of the fastest B outfits ever produced at the local high school.

Jenkins Wins Tennis Match

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—UP.—The defeat of Merritt Cutler of New York by Edward S. The remaining seven seeded stars had little difficulty in advancing to the semi-final round, which will be played tomorrow.

Francis T. Hunter, New Rochelle, N. Y., defeated F. Bonneau of Astoria, L. I. 6-4, 3-6, 7-5.

Doubles competition got underway today with Hunter and Howard Throckmorton, of New York, seeded No. 1.

Hunter and Throckmorton, defeated L. W. Kirkham and T. E. Shaffer, New York, 6-2, 6-1.

PAINFUL CORNS

Loosen—Lift Out

A little known Japanese herb, the discovery of an eminent German scientist (Dr. Stiekel) instantly soothes the corn, callous or wart, then causes it so that shortly you can lift it right out. This new discovery called "Corn Fly" excites the white blood corpuscles to action and granulates the corn at its root so that it drops out and leaves no trace of scar or soreness.

You will also find "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" a boon for sore, tired or perspiring feet.

"Corn Fly" for corns, 35c, "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder," 25c, and "Corn Fly Bunion Remedy," 50c, (all three—$1.10 value—for $1.00), are sold under a positive money-back guarantee by Hi-Gene Co., Newark, N. J., or local druggist.

LIGHT CAGERS PLAY TODAY

The 95 and 105 pound cagers of Roosevelt junior high school will go into action today in the Roosevelt gymnasium against the Garfield junior high school quintet. This is the first inter-school contest in which the Roosevelt athletes have engaged in this season, and their playing standard has therefore not been definitely ascertained. However, if Roosevelt's teams in the least measure up to last year's standard, they ought to be able to hold their ground against the Garfield boys today.

The Roosevelt varsity will meet the Garfield athletes Friday afternoon in the local gymnasium. Several veteran varsity men are again on the heavy-weight outfit at the Roosevelt Junior high school, which is expected to afford a backbone to the local aggregation this season.

Today's 95 pound contest will start at 2:30 o'clock and will be followed at 4:30 o'clock by the 105 pound battle.

Clubman Faces Murder Charge

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—UP.—Without a witness being called the second preliminary hearing of Maj. Owen R. Bird, well known sportsman broker, on charges of murdering his best friend during a family quarrel was concluded in five minutes today.

The district attorney's office said that it believed evidence presented at the first hearing was sufficient to warrant holding Bird on a charge of murder, which supplanted the original manslaughter count. Municipal Judge William Turney took the case under advisement until Thursday. Bird shot to death Percival G. Watson when the latter assertedly interfered in an argument between him and Mrs. Bird.

Scouts Prepare For Exposition

Pantages Plea Set For Feb. 13

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—UP.—The district court of appeals today set Feb. 13 as the date on which it would hear arguments supporting the motion of Alexander Pantages for liberty under bond pending decision on his appeal from a conviction of attacking 17-year old Eunice Pringle.

The matter was taken to the appellate court after Superior Judge Charles W. Fricke twice had refused to liberate the multi-millionaire showman from the county jail. Pantages' attorneys contend that he is gravely ill and that continued confinement at this time may cause his death.

MITCHELL WILL COACH BEAR LINE

BERKELEY, Feb. 4.—Appointment of Clifford "Brick" Mitchell to succeed Dr. Albert Bolos as head line coach of the University of California football team was announced by W. W. Monahan, graduate manager of the Associated Students of the University.

Mitchell, who has been the freshman coach since 1927, will assume his new duties at once, since spring football practice is now being held at the Berkeley institution.

Under Mitchell's direction, freshman football teams have won 15 of 21 games played, tying one other contest. During his ten years of coaching, excluding one year that he was assistant line coach at the University of Oregon, his teams have played 78 games, winning 65, losing 9 and tying 4.

Mitchell played football from 1914 to 1916 under Hugo Bezdek at the University of Oregon. He was All-Coast end in 1915 and 1916, but also played halfback. In 1927 he played with the Mare Island Marines and was a member of the team that won the service championship in the 1917 Tournament of Roses at Pasadena by defeating the Camp Lewis team. He was picked by Walter Camp on his second All-American service team, at end.

In 1919, after completing a war service which included 16 months in the U. S. Marines flying service, he played with the Olympic club of San Francisco, acting as head coach the following year. In 1921 he returned to Oregon as assistant line coach, but left in 1922 to become head coach at San Mateo high school.

In his first year there, the Peninsula team was runnerup for the state championship, and in the next three years won the sectional championship. In his last year at San Mateo, 1926, they won the state title.

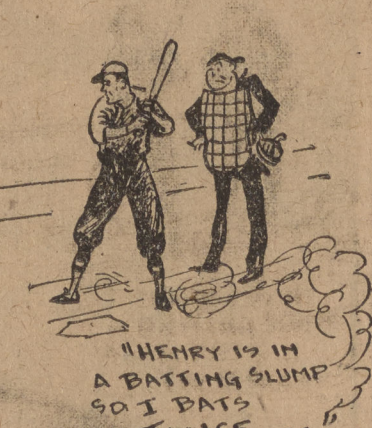

Hereafter Mitchell will devote his entire time to football. His freshman baseball coaching work has been taken over by Harry Kingman, formerly of the New York Yankees.

Athletic Fields Conditioned For Coming Season

The track and diamond at the Richmond Union high school are being put into condition for the coming baseball and track season.

The track and diamond are both being rolled. The track is being widened from six to eight feet, and dirt is being hauled to build up low spots on the football field and diamond. The work is progressing under the direction of Ivan W. Hill, head coach at the high school.

Judging by the improvements now being made on the high school track, the local athletes will now have better conditions under which to practice, and Richmond Union high school will consequently produce more finished track squads.

SAY MISTER—HOW MUCH COSTS THAT PAIR OF BLOOD HOUNDS YOU HAVE IN YOUR WINDOW?

"GENERAL CRACK"
BY GEORGE FREEDY

Copyright 1928 by Dodd Mead & Co., Inc.
The Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring John Barrymore, is based on this novel.

SYNOPSIS

General Crack, soldier of fortune, has routed the enemy and is ready to make King Leopold emperor. The latter is smarting because he had to yield up Princess Eleonora, whom he wished to wed, to General Crack, as his price for supporting him in the war. Leopold secretly leaves Brussels and rides incognito to Crack's estate and meets Eleonora in her chamber at midnight. At dawn, Gabor, Crack's enemy, enters through the window. To ensure his secrecy, Eleonora gives him two large diamonds, given her by General Crack. Gabor then informs Crack, and gloats over the evil tidings.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued

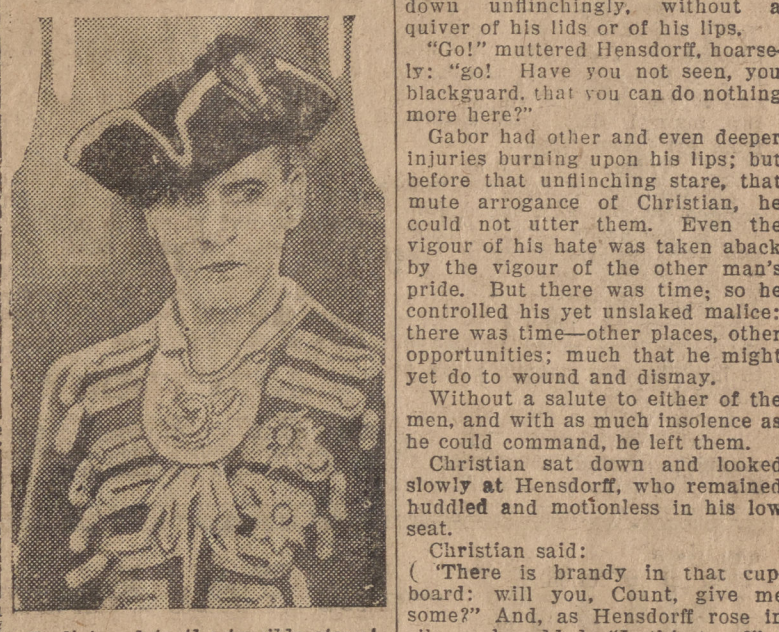

Hensdorff closed his hands over his eyes, and felt his trembling fingers cold upon his hot lids. He heard a sigh from Christian, and then Christian's voice at midnight.

"To whom did Colonel Pons refer when he said 'Past him to all eternity'?"

Gabor licked his lips over the exquisite flavor of his triumph.

"Leopold," he answered.

At that name, Hensdorff felt as if choking ashes filled the warm room. Gabor's voice came deliberately "You Monseigneur, may slay me for what I am about to say; and I can be slain, having said it. My life is in your power, but not my silence.

He listened to the terrible story!

"I have been to Ottenheim," he smiled, "where I so long served you, Monseigneur. I have seen you kindly repaid with a cut across my face. Perhaps you may recall: your memory is good, I think, even for trivialities. I have been to Ottenheim, and I have seen the Princess Eleonora."

"The old, trembling voice of Hensdorff cut across his speech.

"You shall not say what you intended to say! Leave it! Leave it!"

But Gabor replied, undisturbedly: "I will say every word that I intended to say. Why should I leave anything?"

And Christian, in an expressionless tone, said:

"Leave nothing."

"I have been sentinel," smiled Gabor, "outside the Princess Eleonora's window, all through one winter night; a dog to watch outside her window, Prince Christian. That window was unlatched; they were so inexperienced! Both of them so inexperienced!"

"They?" whispered Christian.

And Gabor replied immediately, as if there was a dart in his voice—so keen and vivid were his words:

"She, Eleonora—and Leopold; together in that room all night. When I broke in upon them, thinking the dawn made such dallying indiscreet, I saw her, Prince Christian, half naked at her dressing table; and he behind her, his hands on her bed—your bed, Monseigneur, that you so brightly decked for her."

Christian said, on a sob:

"You blackguard! I will have you flogged to death!"

"Ay, no doubt!" replied Gabor, with ungovernable fury, and flickering hate; "and take these, Monseigneur, as my parting gift—a second time let them be a parting gift."

He brought his hand swiftly from his breast, and held out to Christian the two green diamonds that he had given to Eleonora on his wedding night.

"She gave me these—her bribe for silence. They were lying unregarded, with other trinkets, on her toilet table; her bribe for silence, I say! But she did not offer high enough. No pearls or diamonds, nor gold—ay, nor any gems—could have bought this moment from me, Prince Christian."

Hensdorff cried, with trembling hoarseness:

"For God's sake, have done! Have done! I implore Your Highness to have this wretch dragged out."

"Ay!" Gabor caught it up quickly: "To shout out my news before the camp?"

Christian moved and raised his eyes; his level glance stared down the fury of the man in front of him, his said it, his voice not a flexion out of control:

"I marked you deeper than I thought, Gabor; I see the mark of my ring quite plainly across your lip!"

At this, most unexpected, the spy sneezed back his malice, fluttering on his ashy lips. He had expected death, not this; some fury, tremendous and ungovernable; but never this.

"Back to your gutter, dog!" added Christian. "Back to your filth and garbage—back and do not dare to come within my sight again."

The keen edge of Gabor's triumph was blunted. How many times he had rehearsed this moment; but never like this. His keen eye, vivid with malice, searched in vain for cold hatred, before him for any sign of pain.

"You brave it out, Monseigneur!" he snarled. "But it is done, and cannot be undone; and I was the first to tell you."

He took a stealthy step towards the door.

"Have me touched," he added, in tones shrill with venom, "and I will make her name as stale as that of any commoner of the camp!"

Christian continued to stare him down unflinchingly, without a quiver of his lids or of his lips.

"Go!" muttered Hensdorff hoarsely: "go! Have you not seen your backguard, that you can do nothing more here?"

Gabor had other and even deeper injuries burning upon his lips; but before that unflinching stare, that mute arrogance of Christian, he could not utter them. Even the vigour of his hate was taken away by the vigour of the other man's pride. But there was time; so he controlled his yet unslaked malice; there was time—other places, other opportunities, and that he might yet do to wound and dismay.

Without a salute to either of the men, and with as much insolence as he could command, he left them.

Christian sat down and looked slowly at Hensdorff, who remained huddled and motionless in his low seat.

Christian said:

"There is brandy in this cupboard: will you, Count, give me some?" And, as Hensdorff rose in silence, he added: "Is this true?"

Hensdorff, without answering, found the brandy, poured it out and brought the glass to the table.

Christian repeated:

"Is it true?"

Hensdorff replied:

"Drink that, for God's sake!"

Then added: "Yes."

"You were there?" asked Christian.

Hensdorff replied:

"I was at Rosenberg: I waited for him. I was there when he came home. There is nothing to be said in the way of extenuation, of excuse."

"She—she . . ." asked Christian, and for the first time his voice faltered. "Was it found out?" he added.

"They were such fools!" replied Hensdorff, with bitter contempt. "Yes, it was found out. And that old woman, the Duchess of Schonbuehl, told her what she was . . . she spared her nothing."

"And Pons shot himself," said Christian. "She was not worth it—eh, Hensdorff?"

"Pons was cut to the heart that he had been outwitted, and his trust betrayed; but it was not his fault; it was an act of the most foul treachery!"

Christian raised the glass of brandy, but set it down again.

"Oh, Hensdorff," he murmured, "I feel sick—a sudden and utter sickness. Never in my life before such weakness. . . O God, what shall I do if I should not be able to command myself?"

"I did what I could," answered the minister, in the extreme of bitter distress; "I hastened after him, for I guessed; I tried to save her for you, but I was too late."

"In my room—my house—my bed!" breathed Christian, as if he had not heard these words. "Why, I am ill! It is as if the sudden blow had struck all my senses! And that dog to see her, as he said he saw her. . ."

"Have him strangled," said Hensdorff, "and thrown into a ditch. . ."

"Where is she now?" asked Christian, heedless of this.

"At Ottenheim," replied Hensdorff.

"What title has she now?" asked Christian, with a terrible smile. "What shall I call her? His harlot and my wife?"

Hensdorff said, heavily:

"Everything is in your hands; without you he has no crown, no army, no chance."

"You remind me of that?"

"You must when you come to think—and now you cannot think—discover it for yourself," replied Hensdorff with dignity. "I do not disguise from you, Monseigneur, that you could betray him as he has betrayed you."

TAFT RETURNS TO CAPITAL, REPORTED TO BE GRAVELY ILL

Knew Condition
Friends of the 72-year-old jurist said today that he has known of his high blood pressure for many years. He has taken exceptionally good care of himself, in order to continue his beloved work on the bench. Legal work has been his aim since he was graduated from Yale in 1878—the presidency was an accidental honor given him on the insistence of President Roosevelt.

Meantime, the Senate prepared to take up perhaps next week, the nomination of Hughes to his place. It is understood some members of the judiciary committee will seek an investigation of Hughes' stand on important legal and economic questions, but an adequate majority for ratification of the nomination is assured.

Hughes probably will take office Feb. 24, when the court reconvenes after its present four-week recess.

General Changes
"His present serious condition is the result of general arterio-sclerotic changes." At the home it was said that no change was noted in the former president's condition since this morning. He was still resting comfortably.

Charles and Robert Taft, sons of the sick man, have notified the family they will come to the bedside in a day or two. They were not summoned, indicating possibly that the illness is not now critical, but the family has remained closely-knit ever since the boys left home, and they wish to be here now in case of emergency.

Only Mrs. Taft and a housekeeper, in addition to the nurses, doctors and secretary, were in the big three-story brick house with the former president tonight. Taft's beloved elder brother, Charles P. Taft, died in Cincinnati a little over a month ago, and it was after going there for the funeral that Taft collapsed from grief and strain.

Taken From Train
The retiring chief justice, whose resignation was announced yesterday, a few hours before President Hoover appointed Charles Evans Hughes to his place, arrived today from Asheville, N. C., and was taken from his train in a wheelchair. He was taken immediately to his Wyoming avenue home and placed in bed.

A wan smile, a mere shadow of the white-whiskered Taft countenance, greeted attendants who lifted him from the train. He was

TRAFFIC DRIVE STRESSES CAR HAZARDS

A combined traffic educational and enforcement campaign with the object of bringing about adherence to regulations governing the passing of street cars, was announced today by State Senator Arthur H. Breed, chairman of the California committee on Public Safety.

The California Highway patrol and police departments of 65 major California cities will cooperate with the committee, the state-wide group embraces all organizations interested in the traffic problem and which is conducting a continuous campaign to minimize accidents.

The first ten days of the month will be devoted to education through the medium of the radio stations, moving picture theaters, street car posters, service clubs and the press. Thereafter arrests will be made throughout the state.

The slogan for the month will be "Let Street Cars Unload—Don't Hog the Road." This slogan will appear on street cars and buses throughout the state through the cooperation of the Electric Railway association and the Motor Carriers' association of California.

For the benefit of motorists who are unfamiliar with the amendment, adopted by the last legislature, the legal department of the California State Automobile association today issued the following instructions:

"The driver of a vehicle overtaking any railway, interurban or street car stopped or about to stop for any purpose of receiving or discharging any passenger, shall stop such vehicle to the rear of the nearest running board or door of such railway, interurban or street car and keep it stationary until any such passenger has boarded such car or reached a place of safety, except that where a safety zone has been established or at an intersection where traffic is controlled by an officer or a traffic stop and go signal, a vehicle need not be brought to a full stop before passing any such railway, interurban or street car, but may proceed past such car at a speed not greater than is reasonable or proper and in no event greater than ten miles an hour and with due caution for the safety of pedestrians."

MORTEMOTH KILLS MOTHS

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furniture for a long time, but against with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks and place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deep as possible, behind the cushions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again.

KIDNAPING OF GENERAL LAID TO SOVIETS

PARIS, Feb. 4.—UP—Public ire over the disappearance nine days ago of Gen. A. P. Koutepoff, military chief of Russia anti-Soviets, increased to white heat today, with the Soviet government the center of attack.

Secret Soviet agents in France were openly blamed for Koutepoff's abduction, if such it was, and one deputy said he would ask the French government to explain the activities. The deputy said the agents, belonging to the G. P. U. were violating international rights.

Even the semi-official Temps hinted that France should not consort with such a "boorish" nation as Soviet Russia.

No more was heard of a plan by Koutepoff's friends to search the Soviet embassy here for the general. But Soviet Ambassador Valerian Bovalevsky, in protesting to the government against such a possible raid, erred tactically by denying the embassy had had a hand in the disappearance and that the G. P. U. works directly with Moscow.

His words were interpreted by the press as an admission that the G. P. U. spirited the general away. Premier Andre Tardieu was understood to have received Dovgalevsky's complaint against anti-Soviet press attacks in a very cool manner and to have replied that the French press was free.

A new Soviet version of the disappearance, put forth in Moscow today and echoed by the Communist newspaper Humanite here, was that Koutepoff feared removal as a leader of white Russians and left secretly for South America with large sums belonging to his organization.

This explanation only increased the bitterness of the French press, already aroused over Dovgalevsky's protest.

MRS. SPROULE NAMED IN SUIT

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4.—UP—The Baird family, which has provided scores of legal documents through various court actions, became involved in the contest of a will here today that may determine distribution of an estate valued at between $500,000 and $1,000,000.

Mrs. Marie Baird Baldwin Sproule wife of William P. Sproule former president of the Southern Pacific railroad, was made defendant in the latest litigation.

The suit contesting the will of Mrs. Veronica C. Baird that has been filed for probate was brought by Thomas R. Baird, her son, and Miles T. Baird, also known as Jackson Baird, her grandson.

Mrs. Sproule is a daughter of Mrs. Baird, prominent social leader of San Francisco a number of years ago.

Allegation that Mrs. Baird made a later will that has disappeared was the basis of action filed for probate makes Mrs. Sproule executrix and chief beneficiary and left the son and grandson only $2 between them.

They claim that a later testament was drawn up and since it is missing they should share equally with Mrs. Sproule. This would reduce Mrs. Sproule's share approximately two-thirds.

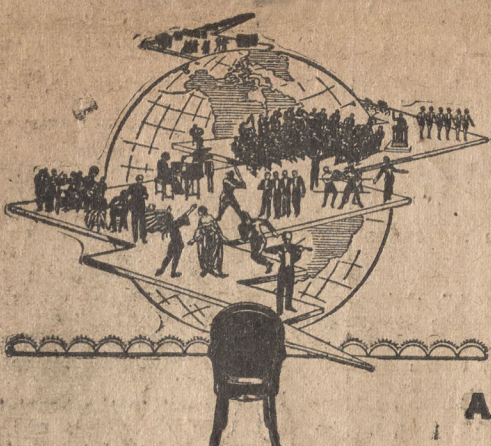

Another son of Mrs. Baird, Benjamin H. Baird, was not a party to the suit today.
